Caledonia Fair Electrical Safety Guidelines

To be circulated to all concessions

Carnivals, festivals and traveling shows have specific electrical safety requirements.

Electrical safety tips for celebrations large or small

Whether you're powering a public address system for speeches and music, setting up a large event tent, plugging in twinkle lights or using portable heaters after the sun sets, following these electrical safety tips will help you avoid an unfortunate accident that could otherwise spoil the fun.

Event tents and decorations

Before moving and setting up a tent, always look up and look out for powerlines first! Remember, you don't have to touch the powerline to get a severe shock, burn or be electrocuted. Even coming too close could cause electricity to jump or 'arc' through the air to the tent pole or other equipment and seriously injure or even kill you.

When using a ladder to put up decorations, banners or lights always look up first for powerlines. Carry your ladder horizontally as you move around the yard or event location.

Stay at least three metres away from all powerlines that run along the street and at least one metre from the wires that run from your house to the electricity system.

Portable generators

Size matters when it comes to portable generators – choose one that meets the needs of the equipment you want to power up.

An ESA inspection is not required for the type of generators that allow you to plug electrical equipment directly into outlets located on the generator.

But generators larger than 12 kilowatts or 240 volts do require an electrical permit and ESA inspection. Call 1-877-ESA-SAFE (372-7233) at least a week in advance of your event.

Water and electricity don't mix! Set up your portable generator in a dry, well-ventilated area outdoors.

Generators produce poisonous carbon monoxide gas. Keep the generator away from your event tent, and also away from open doors, windows and vents of the house or other nearby buildings.

Gasoline and its vapors are extremely flammable. Allow the generator engine to cool at least two minutes before refueling and always use fresh gasoline.

Extension cords

Choose the right extension cord for the job – use three-prong (grounded) cords rated for outdoor use.

Plug in safely – plug your extension cords into an outlet that's protected by a Ground Fault Circuit Interrupter (GFCI) to prevent shocks. You can buy portable GFCI protected outdoor power bars at most home improvement retailers.

Extension cords are rated to deliver a specific amount of power – make sure the one you choose is rated for the amount of power your equipment needs.

Don't coil the cords – coiled extension cords can become very hot and potentially cause a fire.

Remember to secure cords to the ground to prevent tripping hazards or damage to the cord.

Look for the product certification mark on extension cords to make sure they've been safety tested approved for use in Ontario.

Outdoor heat and light

If you're using lights and heaters inside an event tent, remember to make sure they're kept well away from the tent fabric to avoid a fire – check the manufacturer's instructions for specific requirements.

Remember to choose products that are approved for where you're planning to use them – indoors, outdoors or wet locations.

Look for the product certification mark on lighting and heaters to make sure they've been safety tested and approved for use in Ontario.

What you need to know about ELECTRICAL SAFETY

CARNIVALS / TRAVELLING SHOWS

Don't be the one to spoil the fun

Amusement rides and equipment that aren't installed safely could have tragic consequences.

Your best defense:

Ensure rides and equipment are inspected by the Electrical Safety Authority (ESA)!

Know the requirements

Planning an event? Talk to your carnival/travelling show operator about the following:

Electrical permits are not optional. Every show must be inspected to ensure compliance with the Ontario Electrical Safety Code (OESC).

Only certified products are allowed. All rides and equipment must bear the mark of a recognized certification or approval agency. A list of marks is available at www.esasafe.com/electricalproducts/marks.

Permit Number: Make sure your operator provides you with the notification number associated with the electrical permit. This is your record that an ESA inspection has been scheduled to ensure your event meets provincial safety requirements.

Making sure these requirements are met will help your planning go smoothly and keep carnival-goers and operators safe and able to enjoy the fun!

Plan with safety in mind

Look Up! Look Out! Large tents and amusement devices need ample clearance from powerlines to avoid accidental contact. Visit esasafe.com to find required clearance information.

Start early. Ensure your permit application is submitted at least 4-6 weeks prior to the date you would like the event inspection to take place.

Apply for a permit. Download ESA's Entertainment/Special Events permit form at www.esasafe.com in the Business section under Carnivals/Travelling Shows.

Electrical safety at special events

Carnivals and travelling shows present a heightened electrical safety risk to the public.

Here's why:

- » There are many more members of the public than usual at these well-attended events.
- » Repeated set-up and tear-down means more wear and tear on equipment.
- » Just-in-time set-up and tear-down can lead to errors in how equipment is installed.

Carnivals and travelling shows create fun and a sense of community across Ontario every year.

The Electrical Safety Authority (ESA) works successfully with show operators to eliminate electrical hazards that might otherwise spoil the fun.

ESA inspectors know that the show must go on . We work together with operators and communities to make sure the necessary inspections are complete before opening day to minimize disruption and avoid delays.
